RADIUS PAYMENTS

Recently the calculations of radius payments changed. This was as a result of the RAC changing the provider of their data which employers use to establish the appropriate distances.

These new arrangements are approved by HMRC. It is possible that from time to time an established distance could vary by a small amount. In the vast majority of cases, this will have no effect on payments. However for those close to the top or near the bottom of a threshold, it could have an effect, either upwards or downwards.

It is the employer's responsibility to ensure that their employees are paid the correct radius payments within the system agreed by the NJC and approved by HMRC.
